DAVE

Nose

Highly phenolic. Seaweed and driftwood mingling with hay and a briny/rockpool aroma. There's some stewed pear. Water brings huge smokiness, edible seaweed and hot sand.

Palate

Sweet yet peppery. Juniper wood, smoked sausage balanced by a distinct sweetness.

Finish

Tingling and salty.

Comments

Young, vibrant and brimful of personality.

ROB

Nose

Coal tar soap mixed with hot bitcheremun. Slowly becomes grass fires smelt from the seashore, so you get that saltiness in there too.

Palate

Packs quite a punch with a lot of smoke at the front. There is also a sweetness here shrouded in the smoke.

Finish

Short and cleansing.

Comments

A great healing malt for those colder days

DAVE

Nose

There's an initial whiff of glue but then the smoke builds. This time it's tar and creosote, liquorice and a lightly fragrant note. Water reveals bay leaves and drying fishing nets.

Palate

Very sweet start, patisserie, melon then it shifts gear and becomes kiln like (dusty) with pipe tobacco.

Finish

Fresh fish outcakes and after an age, wellies.

Comments

This has an extra dimension and added energy. Beautiful balance.

ROB

Nose

A more rounded peat reek than the previous dram. Slight plastic edge, damp seaweed and wet pebbles.

Palate

Sweet at first then moves into a more earthy notes.

Finish

The smoke comes in waves.

Comments

Islay in a glass, it will take you back there instantly.
